

Stay in the “zone” with solutions for your financial goals.

How much risk are you willing to take to grow your retirement nest egg? The right blend of risk and return potential can increase your confidence in your retirement plan and help you stay in your financial “comfort zone.”

Find your comfort zone in the annuity spectrum

How it works

The left end of the annuity spectrum is the most conservative. We could call it “safety first.” It’s where immediate annuities live, which simply take a sum of money and convert it into a guaranteed stream of income.

Climbing higher across the annuity spectrum in both risk and return are various types of deferred annuities, which also give you the potential to accumulate money over time. Fixed, fixed indexed, registered index-linked and variable annuities are all deferred annuities.

The right end of the spectrum is for those who have the highest tolerance for risk. You’re on this end of the spectrum if you’re willing to risk what you have for the potential to get the highest possible return.
